Overview

Salvatore Polidoro concentrates his practice on advising high-net-worth individuals, families, and business owners in sophisticated taxation, trust, and estate matters. His practice encompasses comprehensive estate planning, including the strategic drafting of wills, trusts, and other essential estate planning instruments, as well as guiding fiduciaries through the complexities of estate and trust administration. He also provides counsel on estate and gift tax planning and advises individuals navigating residency transitions from high-income tax jurisdictions within the United States and internationally.

Earlier in his career, Salvatore successfully represented clients in complex tax litigation, tax controversies, and debt collection disputes involving the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and the Florida Department of Revenue (FDOR).
