Overview

Margaret “Meg” St. John Meehan focuses her practice on the full spectrum of estate planning, from foundational wills, trusts, and incapacity documents to comprehensive estate, tax, and wealth-transfer planning for high-net-worth individuals and multigenerational families. She develops customized strategies to protect, preserve, and grow family wealth across generations while minimizing gift, estate, and generation-skipping transfer taxes. Her practice includes structuring sophisticated trusts and gifts, as well as refining existing planning vehicles to enhance tax efficiency, governance, and long-term flexibility. She also manages all phases of estate administration, including probate, estate tax return preparation, and audit representation, and frequently partners with investment advisors, accountants, and fiduciaries to deliver coordinated and results-oriented guidance.

Meg counsels a diverse and distinguished clientele, including artists, entrepreneurs, business owners, philanthropists, financial professionals, and principals in the private equity and venture capital sectors, on complex planning matters. She also advises family offices and their principals on governance, structuring, and integrated tax, philanthropic, and estate planning solutions tailored to their long-term objectives. Meg is a Fellow of the American College of Trust and Estate Counsel (ACTEC).
