Day Pitney Continues Strategic Growth in New York with the Arrival of David Mathus

Day Pitney LLP is pleased to announce that David Mathus has joined the firm as Counsel in its Corporate and Business Law department, supporting the firm's continued growth in New York. Mathus is a seasoned corporate attorney with extensive experience advising investment banks, companies, and business owners. Mathus was most recently the CEO and Founder of PredictIntel LLC, a business and legal intelligence company. Previously, he was a partner and Co-Head of the New York Corporate and Transactions Group at McDermott Will & Emery LLP. He has also served as President of The Union League Club of New York City and chaired its Strategic Planning and Public Affairs Committees.

"With extensive relationships in the legal and business community, David will play a key role in expanding the firm's corporate practice and overall presence in New York," said R. Scott Beach, Chair of both the Day Pitney Corporate and Business Law department and Family Office practice. "His experience advising major financial institutions allows him to offer clients the same level of strategic insight and transactional sophistication that top investment banks apply to high-stakes deals."

His addition marks the third senior attorney hire in New York within the past six months following Claire Gibson and Laura Land Himelstein, underscoring the firm's growth and commitment to exceptional client service in the region.

At Day Pitney, Mathus will focus his practice on advising on corporate finance, project finance, M&A, private equity, and other transactions, as well as providing insight on deal structuring, governance, and risk management. Beach added, "David's long-standing relationships and experience in energy finance and infrastructure investment will complement Day Pitney's national energy practice by offering clients a broader perspective on capital investment, project financing, and regulatory strategy." Mathus also has extensive experience in multinational transactions, having advised major financial institutions, private companies, business owners, and high-net-worth individuals worldwide.

"I'm excited to join Day Pitney, a firm that shares my commitment to delivering strategic, client-focused legal counsel of the highest quality," said Mathus. "Throughout my career—whether structuring complex transactions, guiding business owners through capital events, joint ventures, corporate initiatives, or governance challenges—I've seen the value of thoughtful, long-term planning. This move presents a great opportunity to work alongside a talented team, advising banks, businesses, family offices, and private investors on corporate finance, investment structuring, and governance strategies. I look forward to leveraging my experience to help clients navigate pivotal decisions and contribute to a firm that values both legal excellence and deep client relationships."

Mathus is a member of the Public Affairs Committee of The Union League Club, the Board of Trustees of Salisbury School in Salisbury, CT, and the National Civics Council of the Jack Miller Center, which promotes the teaching of civics in America's schools and colleges. He earned his J.D. from Wake Forest University School of Law and his B.A. from the College of William & Mary. He is admitted to practice in New York and Connecticut.
